Overview

All doctors practicing medicine in Ireland must be registered with the Irish Medical Council (IMC). Outside of training pathways, there are two types of registration.

These are:

General registration allows doctors to practise independently without supervision, but cannot represent themselves as being a specialist.

Specialist registration allows doctors to practice independently, without supervision and may represent themselves as specialists.

Eligibility Criteria

To be eligible to register for the Irish Medical Council, you must have:

- Completion of a medical degree from a recognised institution
- Satisfactory completion of an internship program
- Possession of relevant professional experience
- Evidence of good standing with another regulatory body where you have practiced.

For more details on your eligibility and to check your own eligibility, visit here .

The Application Process

Once you have secured a role with Athona, it's time to begin the process of applying for your IMC registration:

Create an online account with the IMC

Check eligibility and submit your online application form*

3. Once all necessary documents are submitted, the IMC will issue you with a reference number via

The IMC will then assess and verify your application and documentation

A decision will then be made and your registration with the IMC will be confirmed

*Please note some documentation that is submitted will need to be notarised.

^On occasion, it may be necessary for you to sit the Pre Registration Examination Step.

Documentation

During your application process, you will need to provide the Irish Medical Council with the following documents:

- Proof of identity (Passport)
- Copy of your Basic Medical Qualification (Medical Degree)
- Proof of completion of internship program
- Evidence of professional experience.

The full checklist provided by the IMC can be found here .

Notarising

Documents submitted to the IMC should be notarised or attested by one of the following:

- A Notary Public (a specialist lawyer)
- Commissioner of Oath
- Justice for the Peace
- Solicitor practicing in Ireland or the UK
- Member of An Garda Síochána.

Please note: Notarisation is an identity-based, anti-fraud measure to verify documents and ensure authenticity.
